The Printer.

All without, save the night-watch turning ; And heavily echoed the solemn sound, As slowly he paced o'er the frozen ground. And dark were the mansions so lately that shone, With the joy of festivity gleaming, And hearts that were beating in sympathy then,

Yet the Printer still worked at his lonely post, As slowly he gathered his mighty host.

That would bring to him fear and sorrow; Yet the Printer was there in his shadowy room, And he set in his frame work that rich man's doom!

But the Printer was clicking the types that would tell On the morrow the truth of that midnight spell!

His loftiest hopes now possessing;

Yet the Printer worked on, mid silence and gloom, And dug for Ambition its lowliest tomb. And slowly that workman went gathering up His budget of grief and of gladness; A wreath for the noble, a grave for the low, For the happy a full cup of sadness;

Strange stories of wonder, to enchant the ear. And dark ones of terror to curdle with fear. Full strange are the tales which that dark host shall bear To palace and cot on the morrow;

Oh welcome, thrice welcome, to many a heart! To many a bearer of sorrow; It shall go like the wild and wandering air. For life and its changes are impressed there.
